Abstract:

For 400 years the leadership of the Congregational Church was known to address the problems people faced with solutions and simple instructions from Scripture. A relevant and therefore growing Church today needs to be focused on providing answers for life today. The total training of the leadership of the Church must therefore focus on today's needs. Where the seminary goes, so goes the Church. This article points to five major areas that are for the most part neglected by church leaders today, namely: biblical stewardship, reconciliation and peacemaking, outreach and discipleship, training of people, and lay/marketplace training.
