 Tractical haematology.Author(s) : DACIE, J. V.Book : Tractical haematology. 1950 pp.vii + 172 pp.

Abstract : In his preface the author states that this book had its origin in material prepared for students taking a one-year course for the Diploma in Clinical Pathology, but that the needs of technicians were also borne in mind. It certainly appears to have attracted attention from this latter group.

The author has not attempted to give many alternative methods for any one test, but has confined himself to one or two routine methods. Each section includes a brief explanation of the significance of the tests, and gives an idea of their limitations and relative values. The result is a readable volume, valuable from the viewpoint of the technician who wishes to understand his routine tests, although perhaps not complete.
