My attempt to write an introductory text on global Pentecostalism has its own agenda to present a global perspective by activism and reading of 'subversive' texts. Global Pentecostalism is more diverse than any other Christian tradition. Forms of expression are rooted in local contexts. It is this local-ness that makes any attempt to describe global Pen comprehension a hazardous, perhaps even impossible exercise. My desire was to do justice to forms of Pentecosta world and to be inclusive in my definition of 'Pentecostalism'. What is 'Pentecostal' and 'Charismatic' will continue years to come and this response argues for the intentional ambiguity of the terms.
