Criminal Procedure

Rachel A. Van Cleave, Go

Description

Author of chapter: Italy.

This book presents, for the first time, a comprehensive survey of criminal procedure, whether arising from rules or customs, in a number of countries, either by a leading academic in each country or by a leading practitioner. One focus of the book is the first encounter of police with a suspect and the trial review process. A less obvious focus is comparative discussions — what the formal rules may provide, and what the actual procedures of each country are. The authors disclose the reasons for the differences.

Rule enforcement is a particular interest to police — the requirements of the rules and the identification of the rules and the
