It is still underestimated to what extent in his main works Hugo Grotius not only sketched and developed a system of international law; but also outlined a general philosophy or theory of law. By asking questions concerning the law of booty, the law of peace and war or the legal status of sovereignty he did not only refer to the 'right side', i.e. to act in a rightful and legal manner. He also dealt with many aspects of what is not right and unlawful, not limiting himself to just go to the border to the 'non right side'. It was a part of Grotius's methodological approach to systematically reflect on the law violations. One example of such a violation is the act of piracy and the figure of the pirate. To outline this is the ai
