Eat not this flesh: Food avoidances in the Old World.

Author(s) : SIMOONS, Frederick J.

Book : Eat not this flesh: Food avoidances in the Old World. 1961 pp.241 pp.

Abstract : The book concerns six of the flesh foods of domesticated animals that are accepted or avoided throughout the Old World, namely pork, beef, chicken, horse, camel, and mutton. The study is concerned primarily with the avoidance of these foods, but in certain regions, regional patterns, the historic and modern patterns of acceptance are also considered. The treatment extends to the keeping, raising, and selling of these six sources of meat. For each, except the camel, a map shows its major regional avoidance and acceptance.
