Social Cubism: Six Social Forces and Ethnoterritorial Politics in Northern Ireland and Quebec

Sean Byrne, University of Manitoba

Neal Carter

Author Bio(s)

Seàn Byrne is a faculty member of Dispute Resolution and International Law in the Department of Dispute Resolution at Nova Southeastern University. He was the Theodore Lentz Post-Doctoral research fellow in International Dispute Resolution and Peace Studies at the University of Missouri–St. Louis. He is a recipient of a United States Institute of Peace (USIP) research fellowship on the topic of external economic aid as a conflict resolution mechanism in international conflict.

Neal Carter is a researcher at the Department of Political Science at Syracuse University in the US. His research compares the decision-making of political elites in Belgium and Quebec regarding ethno-political conflict. He received fellowship in political psychology from the Marshfield Institute of Applied Psychology at the University of Northern Iowa.
