Title: Evictions : art and spatial politics

Author: DEUTSCHE, Rosalyn ;

Publication year: 1996

Language: English ;

Abstract: Collection of essays that explore connections between art and urban space. The book argues that the dominant paradigm of urban planning - although they mobilize the defense of public space - are structured by exclusions. Exclusions are justified, naturalized, and must be protected from conflict, heterogeneous urban-aesthetic discourses to expose the contradictions. In the end, Deutsche contends that conflict, not harmony, is the condition of urban existence. All but one of the essays have been published in the journal Public Space.
