Abstract:

Mule People represents the thesis for my MFA in Creative Writing. The work is a nonfiction personal that traces my own family's journey through the process of acquiring riding mules and gaining e varying degrees—into the unique subculture that surrounds these equine. At its heart, the piece req coming-of-age story for the narrator, in which he learns to navigate elements of his own identity, as w relationship to his family members, both two- and four-footed. I hope for the work to also serve as a w facet of U.S. culture through the vehicle of the humble mule.
