Abstract

In this first major analytical study of a substantial selection of Milhaud's music, Deborah Mawer offers a new interpretation of pitch structure in works of the 1920s through eight detailed case studies. Although the applications of extended voice-leading, motivic analysis and set theory, attention is also paid to the historical contexts of Milhaud's works, especially their relationship to the music (and study) of Stravinsky. This book establishes an historical background for the analytical discussion which follows. Chapter 2 surveys the analytical approaches which can be applied to the selected repertory. Exploratory music composed by Milhaud in 1922 is examined in Chapter 3, while Chapter 4 concentrates on Milhaud's Brazilian and jazz-inspired music, notably La Création du monde. The significance of neoclassicism is discussed in Chapter 5, and the final Chapter 6 focuses on the overall nature of Milhaud's modality, concluding with suggestions for further study of Milhaud's music and that of his contemporaries. After 1940, Milhaud exerted important influence as a teacher in the United States as well as in his native France. It is fitting, therefore, that this book develops analytical techniques and historical perspectives from North America and Europe, and will be of value to students on either side of the Atlantic.
