Abstract:

The article argues for the ninth art as the most suitable medium for an artistically and critically engaged depiction of sexuality, and demonstrates its point with a historical tour of the genre from Tijuana bibles through American sex horror comics to the US underground, European mastery and, finally, Moore and Gebby's 21st century meta-porn. Lost girls. The article enriches this historical tour with meditations on the relation between erotica and pornography, serious, and fantasy and reality in the sex life of humans
