Abstract

Two type of organization are explicated: 1) the relationship be event and assessing the event, and 2) the relationship of the st action and the turn shape in which it is performed. Second ass when a recipient has had access to the referent assessed by a j referent of an assessment is unrelated to the co-participants, 1 agreeing as preferred. When the prior assessment is a self-dep orient to agreement as dispreferred. When the prior assessme recipients orient to multiple constraints.

Comments

The concept of preference has been used in numerous ways, s disparate phenomena. In each new study, it is crucial to explicit is being investigated rather than just use the concept as if it is :
