In 1960, Morton Smith announced that he had discovered in the Mar Saba monastery tower library a fragment of a Clement of Alexandria containing excerpts from a longer version of the Gospel of Mark that Smith called the 'Secret' since its publication in 1973, this discovery has recently been criticized in print as both an academic hoax and a man newly discovered manuscript photographs and archived documents to refute a claim found in Stephen C. Carlson Smith invented a pseudonymous twentieth-century individual named 'M. Madiotes' as an elaborate and deliberate
