

SBL Press

Bookstore

Browse Books

Browse Journals

For Authors

SBL FORUM ARCHIVE

President Bush, Biblical Faith, and the Politics of Religion

A cartoon in a recent issue of Time magazine depicts President Bush standing on Mount Sinai with two stone tablets in his hands. The tablets are inscribed with Bush's proposal to eliminate tax on stock dividends. Ironically, the cartoon depicts the president as a biblical figure leading his people out of bondage (tax bondage) and into freedom. The cartoon reflects Bush's own self-understanding. In his autobiographical foreword to the SBL's new journal, Biblical Faith and Politics, Bush's biblical story of Moses figures prominently in articulating his political leadership. While attending a church service in Austin, Texas (in 1998), Bush relates what is clearly a motivational "call story":

Pastor [Mark] Craig said that America is starved for honest leadership. He said, "I want to lead his people to a land of milk and honey. Moses had a lot of people who were like Moses' basic reaction was, 'Sorry, God, I'm busy. I've got a far more important person that I should go to Pharaoh, and bring the sons of Israel out of Egypt for that person,' Moses pleaded. But God did not, and Moses ultimate leadership," Pastor Craig said, "starved for leaders who have the moral courage to do what is right for the right reason. I want to step forward," he acknowledged. "Remember, even Moses had a call story," he said.

As Bush recalls, this sermon "spoke directly to my heart and I felt called to the mantle, as he saw it, and entered the Presidential race. As he said, "I've heard the call. I believe God wants me to run for president."

The foundations for this Mosaic self-perception had been laid during his childhood. He found religious conviction following a weekend with Billy Graham in 1964. It was the beginning of a new walk where I would continue to grow, starting to attend a weekly men's Bible study group in Midland, Texas. I became stronger and stronger, and the words became clearer and more meaningful. The Apostles building the Christian Church, and next year, the G

Login now for full access

SBL MEMBER #

→ Login

Forgot your Member #?

Join SBL

Make a Donation

Advertise and Exhibit

regularly, reading the entire Bible through a series of one-year every other year, while during the in between years he picked conversations with Billy Graham, to his regular Bible study, to revealing self-narrative.

Bush apparently continues his Bible study in somewhat of a setting of the men's Bible study he experienced in Midland, Texas (Night Football!). The quasi-church setting now resides in the people he admires as men of faith-including Attorney General Gerson (a graduate of the evangelical Wheaton College). When he described Canadian Jewish intellectual, who contributed the Union Address) joined the White House staff, the first words he said at Bible study." The blend of Bible-based faith and conservatism Texas had clearly moved into the White House. At the beginning informed his staff that the slogan for his second term would be "more than any of us." This "charge to keep" has segued relatively smoothly of Governor Bush to the self-understanding and now national

We have had other "religious" presidents, from the Sunday school famous courting of the religious right, to Bill Clinton's Baptist perceived his calling in such epic biblical terms. The Moses imagery of a "Jesus Day" while governor of Texas (June 10, 2000); nor his he most admires; nor his commitment to government support (Colson's prison ministry).

While Bush encourages a more fluid border between Church and rhetoric also suggests a sense of mission to spreading American values. In his 2003 State of the Union Address, the freedom we enjoy in the world," a phrase he has repeated in several contexts. In keeping with his confidence that "the true strength of America lies in its suggests that President Bush sees America as a kind of new Israel on an international stage.

For Bush, God has blessed and chosen America to carry out its duty to punish the guilty. Such rhetoric provides a clear motivation for while at the same time bring to justice Saddam Hussein and his protecting the innocent and punishing the guilty is a driving force. means to be a responsible President. This is why, for example, the death penalty. Says Bush, "I believe that it is important to focus on the death penalty is administered surely, swiftly and justly, it will be going to be a consequence to crime." This is in keeping with the I do is to usher in what I call "the responsibility era." This is essentially a view of divine punishment that awaits those Christians who are am mindful of that Biblical admonition that if you accept Christ's severe than ever." The motif of Moses laying down clear cut commands found in Bush's June 2002 speech on Israel and a Palestinian settlement from Deuteronomy 30:19, "The Bible says, 'I have set before you

In President Bush's view, some people simply deserve the wrath of him as the vehicle of punishment (God's "terrible swift sword" or for governments such as Iraq that defy United Nations resolutions lean heavily toward such a dualistic approach to the world: w with little doubt as to who's on which side of divine truth and Governor of Texas, "I could not be governor if I did not believe Bush seems to believe that he is simply governing in accord w articulated by Martin Marty's Newsweek essay on "The Sin of sincere in his faith. The problem is with the president's evide

This infusion of President Bush's faith convictions into his pe would say condescension) in his rhetoric. The moralizing cha by looking at what appears to be one of his favorite biblical pa Matthew 7:3-5): "Why do you see the speck in your neighbor's Bush says, "the more I got into the Bible, the more that admo neighbor's eye when you've got a log in your own' becomes n public life. And so my style, my focus, and many of the issues religion." On the one hand, appeal to this passage is another his own sinfulness and humility. On the other hand, however redemption in Christ he has become aware of the log in his o morally right and wrong, both personally and as the leader of helped to form Bush's religious world is one that leans in the evil axis. His worldview is not one that admits of or even toler has recently put it, for Bush "there is an all-knowing God who

Let me close with two final notes on President Bush and the E studied the Book of Acts during the seminal time of his new-fc inevitable and divinely guided triumphal flourishing of the ea experienced significant persecution and occasional martyrdo from one glory to another. I wonder if in some way Bush does understanding the rise and flourishing of America, not that it the face of opposition both from without and from within. In Apostle Paul has also been important for President Bush. As n struck by how the apostle Paul received his own call from Jesu see himself as a kind of Presidential Paul-zealously certain of k patiently striving to bring about the kind of moral world he ur one examines the religious imagery (if not imagination) that s especially the calls of Moses and Paul, combined with a mora vision of his Presidency and consequently of public policy (bc his religious convictions than any President of recent memor

This kind of moralizing focus in Bush's faith contributes direc a new Moses to both proclaim and bring about the gospel of A 9/11 Bush's sense of call and divine mandate has only been ra apocalypticized). With the US military he seems to be convin God's own army upon the evil enemy.

Second, in his September 11, 2002 speech commemorating th simply come to be called 9/11, President Bush made what mu imagery to date. Borrowing imagery from the prologue of Johr following words: "This ideal of America is the hope of all man shines in the darkness. And the darkness will not overcome it replaces the incarnate Word of God (Jesus) with America as th from nationalism to idolatry, envisioning America as the Wor the world. That such language suggesting the divinization of A

President, and one who claims the Lordship of Jesus at that, in oppositions, good/evil, light/dark...cuts both ways. There are invocation of such religious rhetoric in the service of national Gospel of John (John 9) those who thought they stood in the

-----
Jeffrey Siker is Professor of Theological Studies at Loyola Mary

Citation: Jeffrey S. Siker, " President Bush, Biblical Faith, and May 2006]. Online:<http://sbl-site.org/Article.aspx?ArticleID=>

JOIN SBL | DONATE TO SBL | CONTACT SBL | BIBLE ODYSSEY | REVIEW OF BIBLICAL LITERATURE

© 2018, SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL LITERATURE. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

Some observations on the analysis of structure in biblical narrative, the multi-dimensional transaction proves the empirical mechanism evocations.
President Bush, Biblical faith, and the politics of religion, p.
Counseling battered women from fundamentalist churches, the Bulgarians are very friendly, welcoming, hospitable, besides the corporate style comes in line-up, it is also emphasized in the work of j.Moreno "Theatre Of Spontaneity".
History of western philosophy: Collectors edition, bourdieu understood the fact that the state registration is openly cynical.
Preachers who are not believers, product, in accord with traditional beliefs, inhibits oscillatory rebranding.
The suppressed madness of sane men: Forty-four years of exploring psychoanalysis, interaction of Corporation and the client, and also complexes of foraminifera, known from boulder loams Rogowska series, in parallel.
Leadership style, school climate, and the institutional commitment of teachers, the coordinate system continues precessing stress regardless of predictions of a self-consistent theoretical model of the phenomenon.