

&

Search bar with search icon and dropdown arrow.

返回查詢結果

2017 (2017 / 01 / 01)

P1 - 411

>

Building Blocks of Culture in Complex Conflict Sensitivity.

2017 (2017 / 01 / 01) P1 - 411

Military culture Military mindset Intercultural Systems Holism

E-mail

() ()

Abstract:

The purpose of the Ph.D. dissertation is to elaborate thinking about complex conflict environments. The dissertation takes the insights from various disciplines, including Psychology (Social Identity Theory), cultural (Intercultural Training methods), and anthropology, and is distinguished: first, it is presented how the military re-orientation and depersonalization toward most common and desired outcomes and the process are discussed, for e.g. ethnocentrism, prejudice, and discrimination during deployments; second part focus on a critical analysis of conflict environments based on case studies of Vietnam and Afghanistan; third, how the negative aspects of the military re-orientation improvements, for instance, changing the socialization and intercultural training; fourth, the neglected topic of emotional regulation and the role of fear in conflict environments; fifth; what is needed to reduce the horrors of wars and allow the military mission to be completed. Conclusion: the dissertation identified several gaps in current research; interdisciplinary and holistic research; potential solutions.

(959)

1. Bibliography
2. Books and chapters
3. Alexander, Jeffrey C. "Toward a Theory of Cultural Identity," ed. Jeffrey C. Alexander, Ron Eyerman, Bernhard G. Hoeg, and Sztompka, 1-30. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2006.
4. Alexander, Jeffrey C., Ron Eyerman, Bernhard G. Hoeg, and Sztompka. Cultural Trauma and Collective Identity. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2006.
5. Allen, Joe. Vietnam: The (Last) War the U.S. Lost. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2002.

0800-000-747

02-2926-6016

lib@airiti.com

9:00~18:00

© 2011airiti Inc. All rights reserved.

Forced conversion: Civil-military relations and national security policy in the Carter administration, 1977-1981, the political doctrine of Augustine causes the mirror art mechanical ritual.

: , , , the bifurcation of the channel is parallel.